STRIP 1 | HERO SECTION

Your brand has a story.

Not corporate. Not "girl boss." Not agency jargon. Not "leave it to me, I'll handle everything."

More of — let's figure it out together.

STRIP 2 | WHO WE ARE

Hi, I'm Yashitha. Professional overthinker. Creative partner by choice.

Over the last five years, I've worked with 250+ brands across wellness, food, fashion, education, hospitality, retail and everything in between.

I've written captions at midnight, planned launches over coffee, built websites from scratch, and spent an unreasonable amount of time choosing between two shades of beige.

Because details matter.

And because every brand deserves more than generic marketing advice copied off the internet.

250+ brands. 5+ years. One slightly obsessive love for good branding.

STRIP 3 | OUR APPROACH

No, you don't have to hand over your passwords and disappear.

One of the biggest myths in marketing is that you hire someone, step away, and everything magically works. If only.

The best results happen when both sides show up. You know your business better than anyone else. I know how to turn that knowledge into stories, strategies and content people actually care about.

You bring the expertise. I'll bring the strategy, creativity, and occasional over-analysis.

Together, we'll build something meaningful.

STRIP 5 | TESTIMONIALS

Things people have said about working with me.

"More than anything, I appreciate her work ethic, her commitment, and the genuine effort she puts into helping the brand grow." — Harini, The Journal Lab

"From the very first brief, she demonstrated a strong grasp of our business objectives and quickly translated them into compelling visual stories. Her attention to detail, editing finesse, and creative judgment brought a high level of polish to every final output." — Saravanan Ramdoss, Founder, SalesFlowX

"She is also incredibly easy to work with. Throughout the process, including during the video shoot, Yashitha was understanding, patient, and proactive. She introduced unique ideas and walked us through unfamiliar processes, making everything feel seamless and manageable." — Athrukshna, Bridgewoods International

STRIP 6 | WHY WORK WITH US

Because someone has to care about the tiny things.

The caption. The font. The colour palette. The button placement. The way your website feels. The reason people follow. The reason they stay.

Good branding isn't one big moment. It's hundreds of tiny decisions that quietly work together.

I just happen to enjoy thinking about those decisions more than most people.

STRIP 7 | FINAL CTA

Let's build something worth talking about.

Not because it's trendy. Not because everyone else is doing it. But because it genuinely reflects who you are and what your business stands for.

No jargon. No unnecessary buzzwords. No pretending marketing is rocket science. Just thoughtful strategy, creative storytelling, and a collaborative process that actually makes sense.

Coffee optional. Good ideas mandatory.

The story behind the strategy.

250+ brands. 5+ years. One slightly obsessive love for good branding.

STRIP 1 | THE STORY

This part will tell a lot about me.

This definitely wasn't the plan.

I was supposed to be a psychologist. Degree? Done. Higher studies abroad? Planned. Life? Sorted.

Then COVID happened and, like most plans in 2020, mine quietly packed its bags and left.

While I was home trying to figure out what came next, my family offered me a deal:

"Learn something useful and we'll get you a laptop and a new phone."

Now, I wish I could tell you I had some grand vision for my future. I didn't. I simply wanted the laptop.

So I signed up for a graphic design course.

What was supposed to be a temporary way to spend a few months somehow turned into a career. One course became a job. One job became years of learning. And before I knew it, I was doing far more than design.

One course became a job. One job became a career nobody saw coming — least of all me.

I found myself working on content, branding, strategy, websites, marketing, client management and operations. I went from designing posts to sitting in rooms where real business decisions were being made.

Over the years, I had a front-row seat to businesses of all shapes and sizes. I worked closely with founders, watched brands grow, learned how teams function, and discovered what actually happens behind the scenes of successful businesses.

And somewhere in the middle of all that, I realised something.

I may not have become a psychologist. But I never stopped studying people. Today, I just do it through brands.

Through the stories they tell. The way they communicate. The way people connect with them. And the reasons customers choose them.

Great marketing isn't really about algorithms, trends, or posting every day. It's about understanding people.

Funny how I ended up using my psychology degree after all.

Eventually, there came a point where I stopped asking, "Could I do this on my own?" And started asking, "Why not?"

So I did.

Now I help brands find their voice, tell better stories, and build a presence that feels less like marketing and more like a genuine connection.

STRIP 2 | CLOSING CTA (new — currently the page just stops)

That's the short version.

The long version involves a lot of coffee, several existential crises about font pairing, and a genuine belief that every brand has a story worth telling properly.

If yours is ready to be told, I'd love to hear it.

FAQ PAGE

STRIP 1 | HEADER

Questions people usually ask before saying yes.

(If yours isn't here, that's what the contact form is for.)

STRIP 2 | THE QUESTIONS

What kind of brands do you work with? Mostly small to mid-sized businesses and founders who care about getting it right — wellness, food and beverage, fashion, interiors, hospitality, education, and a fair bit of B2B. If your brand has a story worth telling, we're probably a good fit.

Do you only do social media, or more than that? More than that. Social is often where people start, but the work usually grows into positioning, website content, branding direction, or full campaigns. Think of social as the entry point, not the ceiling.

How involved do I need to be? More than "hand it over and disappear," less than "do it yourself with extra steps." You know your business better than anyone — I just need enough access to that knowledge to turn it into strategy and content. Expect a few calls, some quick feedback loops, and zero radio silence from either side.

How long does a project usually take? Depends on scope. A content calendar or campaign can move in 1–2 weeks. Brand positioning, websites, or full rebrands usually take longer — 4 to 8 weeks isn't unusual, depending on how many rounds of feedback we go through.

Do you work with brands outside India? Yes. Several past projects have been for international audiences and bilingual markets, so distance or language isn't a dealbreaker.

What do you need from me to get started? A clear sense of what you're trying to achieve, access to whatever brand materials already exist (even messy ones), and a willingness to answer questions you didn't expect to be asked. The rest, we figure out together.

How does pricing work? It depends on scope — a single campaign looks very different from an ongoing retainer. The best next step is a quick call so I can understand what you actually need before throwing numbers around.

What if I just need advice, not a full project? That's what the Marketing Consultation service is for. Sometimes a clear-headed conversation is worth more than a 12-page strategy deck.

Do you sign NDAs or contracts? Yes, always. Clear agreements make for better working relationships, not worse ones.

What if we start working together and it's not the right fit? Then we have an honest conversation about it. That's rare, but it happens, and pretending otherwise helps no one.
